MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE NATIONAL LIBRARY
OF SOUTH AFRICA BILL, 1998

1. There are at present two National Libraries, the State Library, Pretoria, and the South African Library, Cape Town. It has become necessary to review the role and functions of these libraries and to address certain problems relating to their role, functions and financial constraints.
2. In executing their functions in terms of the existing Act, they provide information services and information products which enable other library and information services, such as provincial and metropolitan library services, and public, university and school libraries, to render more efficient and cost-effective information services to their users.
3. Although the functions of the two libraries have been clearly delineated to avoid duplication, the existence of two National Libraries causes some confusion among their clients nationally and internationally regarding the functions of each and as to which library fulfils the leadership role in the South African library and information services community.
4. The need has been identified to establish a single National Library of South Africa which can develop into a modern and dynamic institution that plays a leading role in the establishment of the information society in South Africa. The Bill therefore offers the scope to create a transformed institution which can be repositioned within the library and information services sector of South Africa. The new institution will focus its programmed on providing access to information in order to support the priorities of the national Growth and Development Strategy.
5. The objects of the National Library of South Africa will be to contribute to social, economic and cultural development, as well as education and innovation. That will be done by collecting, recording, preserving, making available and promoting an awareness and appreciation of the national documentary heritage and by facilitating access to the world's information resources. The new National Library of South Africa will consist of two branches, incorporating the State Library and the South African Library. The functions of the new institution have also been revised to bring the institution in line with information needs in South Africa and the current international practice of national libraries.

The functions as proposed in the Bill include—

- * the collection of the national published documentary heritage through the legal deposit of publications;
- * the compilation of national bibliographies and catalogues to provide access to information;
- * the rendering of reference and information services nationally;
- * the rendering of preservation services;
- * the promotion of an awareness of the national published documentary heritage;
- * the promotion of information literacy;
- * research and liaison; and
- * the provision of leadership, guidance and advice to South African libraries and information services.

6. The clauses of the Bill regarding the objects, functions and board of the proposed National Library of South Africa, as well as those relating to staff matters, funding and the regulations, have all been revised.
