(d) A participant shall, at the request of a company and against payment of such fee as may be prescribed by the Minister from time to time, furnish that company with such details of uncertificated securities in the company as are reflected in the subregister maintained by the participant. 10

Short title

2. This Act is called the Companies Second Amendment Act, 1998.

MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE COMPANIES SECOND AMENDMENT BILL, 1998

1 INTRODUCTION

1.1 In South Africa, both the transfer of shares and the settlement of share transactions are essentially paper-based. The physical handling of share certificates and transfer deeds plays an important role in this regard. The unprecedented increase in transactions effected on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange (“the JSE”) in recent years has brought increased risks such as delayed settlement and tainted scrip. It has also meant that the settlement system has, up to now, not conformed in significant respects with the G-30 recommendations on clearing and settlement despite the fact that the JSE now has a world-class automated trading system.

1.2 In order to address these concerns, the JSE has for the past 18 months in co-operation with the major industry participants been investigating the possibility of dematerialising shares in a Central Securities Depository (“CSD”). The introduction of section 91A into the Companies Act, 1973 (Act No. 61 of 1973), is imperative in order to permit the dematerialisation of securities. It will permit share certificates to be dematerialised and membership in a company and ownership of dematerialised shares to be electronically transferred without the necessity of completing or filing any paper.

1.3 The amendment to the Companies Act, 1973, is proposed simultaneously with amendments to the Safe Deposit of Securities Act, 1992 (Act No. 85 of 1992), the Stamp Duties Act, 1968 (Act No. 77 of 1968), and the Marketable Securities Tax Act, 1948 (Act No. 32 of 1948). It is also proposed that an Uncertificated Securities Tax Act be introduced to deal with the dutying of transactions in securities.

2 THE PROPOSED SECTION 91A

2.1 Subsection (1)

2.1.1 The definitions of “central securities depository” and “participant” refer to definitions contained in the Safe Deposit of Securities Act, 1992. It is necessary to refer to these definitions in view of the fact that both the CSD and the participants play a crucial role in dematerialisation.

2.1.2 The definition of “subregister” clarifies the fact that a participant’s record of uncertificated securities will form part of a company’s main register of members. This definition, read together with subsections (3)(c) and (4)(b), establishes the important fact that once a person is recorded in that person’s own name in a participant’s subregister, that person will be recognised by the company for all purposes as a member of the company. Such a person will thus be able to exercise his or her rights as a member directly against the company and not only indirectly through a participant.

2.1.3 The definition of “uncertificated securities” clarifies which securities are uncertificated securities and are thus subject to section 91A. The word “uncertificated” and the word “dematerialisation” are internationally accepted terms for the concepts dealt with in this legislation.

2.2 Subsection (2)

This subsection makes it clear that section 91A will apply to uncertificated securities and will regulate uncertificated securities notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any law, the common law, an agreement or any articles. The Companies Act, 1973, will, however, apply to uncertificated securities except to the extent expressly amended by section 91A. The proposed section 91A does not require securities to be issued or maintained in uncertificated form, but that once they are in uncertificated form, section 91A will apply to them.

2.3 Subsection (3)

2.3.1 This subsection sets out certain of the obligations of a company and of a participant in respect of uncertificated securities. This subsection provides that it is the participant and not the company who is responsible for maintaining certain statutory information in respect of uncertificated securities. The participant is also responsible for ensuring the correctness of transfers of uncertificated securities effected by it. In so doing, the participant acts as agent of the person who has deposited securities with the participant and not as agent of the company which issued the uncertificated securities.

2.3.2 Section 91A does not affect the right of shareholders and other members of the public to inspect the register of a public company at the company's office. As a participant will, in terms of section 91A, be responsible for keeping the subregister, it will be obliged to give details in respect of such subregister to the company so that the company will, in turn, be able to produce a consolidated share register on request from any person.

2.4 Subsection (4)

This subsection determines the exact moment in which transfer of both ownership in and membership in respect of uncertificated securities is considered to have occurred. The subsection ensures that the time at which membership is acquired and at which ownership is transferred is the same and is necessary in order to avoid doubt and to determine the moment at which complete and irrevocable delivery versus payment of uncertificated securities will occur.

2.5 Subsection (5)

While the previous subsection deals with transfer of ownership and membership, this subsection deals with transfer of the uncertificated securities themselves. These securities will be reflected in an electronic form in the electronic securities accounts maintained by a participant. As the signature of paper transfer deeds is inappropriate in an electronic environment, this subsection provides that transfer may only be effected by a participant and then only on receipt of an instruction to transfer sent and properly authenticated in terms of the rules of a CSD or by order of court. This is to ensure that although the relevant member of the company will no longer sign a transfer deed prior to transfer being effected out of that person's name, the maximum level of protection is maintained prior to a transfer of uncertificated securities being effected.

2.6 Subsection (6)

In view of the fact that settlement of uncertificated securities will happen on a rolling basis every day on which the JSE is open for trading, it is not possible for a subregister to close in the manner contemplated in section 114 of the Companies Act, 1973. A company which wishes to prepare a register as at a certain date will be able to obtain a complete record as at the end of that day, including a record of all electronic transfers which occurred on that day. Such record will thus reflect the transfers of all shares purchased at least five days previously (as settlement will occur on T + 5). This means that the register will often be more up to date than existing registers which only reflect transfers once the relevant documents have been lodged for transfer. This may be some time after the initiating purchase transaction.

2.7 Subsection (7)

2.7.1 As the whole intention of the dematerialisation of securities is to eliminate the need for paper certificates and transfer deeds, this subsection prevents a company from issuing certificates evidencing, or purporting to evidence, title to uncertificated securities.

2.7.2 A person may, however, withdraw uncertificated securities from the CSD and obtain a certificate in respect of such securities. Subsection 7(b) sets out the procedure to be followed in this regard.

2.8 Subsection (8)

This subsection determines the liability to be borne by anyone who takes unlawful action as set out in this subsection.

2.9 Subsection (9)

This subsection determines the warranties and indemnities which are deemed to have been given by any person who gives an instruction to transfer uncertificated securities and who effects such a transfer other than in terms of an instruction to transfer, sent and properly authenticated in terms of the rules of a CSD. Read together with the warranty and indemnity contained in the Safe Deposit of Securities Act, 1992, these provisions ensure that no person will suffer any direct loss or damage if uncertificated securities are transferred without such person's consent.

2.10 Subsection (10)

This subsection ensures that new issues made subsequent to the commencement of the dematerialisation process will be able to be made directly in dematerialised form if the person to whom the securities are offered so elects. The subsection seeks so to limit the opportunities for fraud in respect of the paper-based securities as far as possible.

2.11 Subsection (11)

This subsection empowers the Minister to make regulations for any matter supplementary or ancillary in respect of uncertificated securities.

3. PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE

The State Law Advisers and the Department of Finance are of the opinion that this Bill must be dealt with in accordance with section 75 of the Constitution since it contains no provision to which the procedure set out in section 74 or 76 of the Constitution applies.

4. PERSONS AND BODIES CONSULTED

The proposal to dematerialise securities has been developed by the JSE in co-operation with the major banks, the Banking Council, the Fund Managers' Association, the Shareholders' Association, the Transfer Secretaries, the Financial Services Board and the South African Reserve Bank. In addition, the legislation has been informally presented to the parliamentary Portfolio Committees on Finance and on Trade and Industry as well as to the Select Committee on Finance of the NCOP. Copies of the legislation were provided by the FSB to all parties whom the FSB consulted about the proposed amendments to the Safe Deposit of Securities Act, 1992, and the JSE has provided copies to all persons to whom presentations on the proposed dematerialisation have been made (approximately 1400 persons and institutions including the Law Society, the Merchant Bankers' Association, the Institute of Corporate Treasurers, the Institute of Chartered Secretaries, the Institute of Chartered Accountants, Sanlam and Old Mutual). The legislation is also available on the STRATE web-site, the web-site of the JSE team managing the dematerialisation.
