Background

The Council for the Built Environment (CBE) was established as a statutory body by Parliament (Act 43 of 2000) to provide leadership to, and ensure good governance of the professions, while serving as a two-way channel for coordinated input, into the restructuring and development process, between the professions and Government. The Council reflects the spirit and intent of the Act, comprising representatives of the leadership of the six individual councils, representatives from key government departments and representatives from the public. These members were appointed on the strength of their experience in their particular fields of expertise and their commitment to the advancement of the built environment professions.

In December 2000, the President assented to legislation providing for the establishment of councils for the professions of architecture, engineering, landscape architecture, property valuation and quantity surveying. These councils were established in August 2001 and replaced the previous statutory councils and boards for the professions. The various councils register professionals and candidates within their respective professions, uphold professional conduct, identify functions of each profession, recommend professional fees and promote regional and international recognition of the professions.

Each of the Councils will meet at least twice a year and will be supported by administrative staff. The period of office for the members is 4 years.

Each nomination must be in writing and must contain the following information in the detail required by the individual Councils.

(Please refer to them directly for further information):

- The Council for which the nomination is made;
- The name and address of the nominating person or organisation;
- The name, address and identity number of the nominee;
- A declaration, signed by the nominee that he or she is prepared to serve on the relevant Council or/and any of its Committees and is not disqualified from serving on the relevant Council
- Motivation for the appointment of the nominee to the relevant Council (not exceeding one page)
- A short curriculum vitae of the nominee (not exceeding two pages)

Nominations should reach the respective Councils at the addresses below not later than 28 April 2005. No late submissions will be accepted. For further information please contact the respective Council at the addresses below.
