General Notice - Explanatory Memorandum for the Draft General License Fees Regulation, 2012

Introduction

In 2009, the Independent Communications Authority of South Africa (the Authority) published in Government Gazette No 32084 the General Licence Fees Regulations (the Regulations). The purpose of the Regulations was to prescribe (1) administrative fees payable to apply, register, renew, amend or transfer a licence and (2) annual licence fees payable. The Authority now intends reviewing the Regulations due to certain administrative hurdles associated with their implementation.

Discussion

The Authority took a position at the time that despite the new legislative framework ushered in by the introduction of the Electronic Communications Act No 36 of 2005 (the ECA), the levying of annual licence fees remained relevant and justifiable. Nonetheless, two principles should guide the levying of annual licence fees in the new legislative environment: The first principle is that annual licence fees may only be imposed on the licensed activities. Secondly, annual licence fees may be levied on a number of different financial measures, such as on gross profit or gross revenue. In adopting the Regulations, the Authority took a position that annual licence fees should be levied on gross profit due to the fact that, among other things:

- (1) Only profitable entities will pay fees, thus giving a regulatory holiday to unprofitable entities.
- (2) Levying fees based on a percentage of gross profit is competition-neutral in the sense that it treats different entities differently.
- (3) The methodology takes into account the impact of economic cycles on profitability.
- (4) The methodology is easy to administer.

Three years of implementing the Regulations have brought to the fore certain administrative challenges relating to collecting annual licence fees. Section 1 of the Regulations defines Gross Profit as total revenue generated from licensed activities less total costs directly incurred in the provision of such services. Whilst the intention of the Regulations was to levy annual licence fees on profitable entities only, the reality of the matter is that this definition has led to regulatory arbitrage where certain operators subtract from their revenues all manner of costs, so as to declare as minimal a profit as possible or in extreme cases to declare a loss. The Authority has not been able to verify that the fees collected are indeed what were due. This has led to a qualified audit opinion against the Authority during the 2011/2012 financial years and has implications for prior year records as well. At the centre of the qualification is the fact that there is no way of verifying the accuracy of costs. The financial statements submitted by operators are not disaggregated to the level of identifying direct costs incurred in providing licensed activities. Due to information asymmetry the Authority has been at the mercy of operators in terms of interpreting what direct costs entail. The idea of providing a guideline on calculating direct costs may not be a viable option since licensed activities differ from one operator to the other.

It is for this reason that the Authority is proposing to amend the base upon which annual licence fees are calculated. The proposal is to levy annual licence fees based on annual turnover derived from licensed activities, as outlined in Schedule 2 and 3 of the draft regulations.

Conclusion

The attached draft regulations propose an administratively simpler method of calculating annual licence fees than the current Regulations. The public is therefore invited to make comments on the draft regulations. The rest of the current Regulations remain unchanged apart from consequential changes brought about as a result of the change in the formula. In order to encourage entry or to lower entry barriers into the market, the Authority is proposing a regulatory holiday for new entrants, in terms of which they are only required to pay annual licence fees after 3 years of starting operations and generating an income.
