NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT PRINCIPLES 30

Principles

2. (1) The principles set out in this section apply throughout the Republic to the actions of all organs of state that may significantly affect the environment and—

- (a) shall apply alongside all other appropriate and relevant considerations, including the State’s responsibility to respect, protect, promote and fulfil the social and economic rights in Chapter 2 of the Constitution and in particular the basic needs of categories of persons disadvantaged by unfair discrimination; 35
- (b) serve as the general framework within which environmental management and implementation plans must be formulated; 40
- (c) serve as guidelines by reference to which any organ of state must exercise any function when taking any decision in terms of this Act or any statutory provision concerning the protection of the environment;
- (d) serve as principles by reference to which a conciliator appointed under this Act must make recommendations; and 45
- (e) guide the interpretation, administration and implementation of this Act, and any other law concerned with the protection or management of the environment.

(2) Environmental management must place people and their needs at the forefront of its concern, and serve their physical, psychological, developmental, cultural and social interests equitably. 50

(3) Development must be socially, environmentally and economically sustainable.

(4) (a) Sustainable development requires the consideration of all relevant factors including the following:

- (i) That the disturbance of ecosystems and loss of biological diversity are avoided, or, where they cannot be altogether avoided, are minimised and remedied; 55

- (ii) that pollution and degradation of the environment are avoided, or, where they cannot be altogether avoided, are minimised and remedied;
 - (iii) that the disturbance of landscapes and sites that constitute the nation's cultural heritage is avoided, or where it cannot be altogether avoided, is minimised and remedied; 5
 - (iv) that waste is avoided, or where it cannot be altogether avoided, minimised and re-used or recycled where possible and otherwise disposed of in a responsible manner;
 - (v) that the use and exploitation of non-renewable natural resources is responsible and equitable, and takes into account the consequences of the depletion of the 10 resource;
 - (vi) that the development, use and exploitation of renewable resources and the ecosystems of which they are part do not exceed the level beyond which their integrity is jeopardised;
 - (vii) that a risk-averse and cautious approach is applied, which takes into account 15 the limits of current knowledge about the consequences of decisions and actions; and
 - (viii) that negative impacts on the environment and on people's environmental rights be anticipated and prevented, and where they cannot be altogether prevented, are minimised and remedied. 20
- (b) Environmental management must be integrated, acknowledging that all elements of the environment are linked and interrelated, and it must take into account the effects of decisions on all aspects of the environment and all people in the environment by pursuing the selection of the best practicable environmental option.
- (c) Environmental justice must be pursued so that adverse environmental impacts 25 shall not be distributed in such a manner as to unfairly discriminate against any person, particularly vulnerable and disadvantaged persons.
- (d) Equitable access to environmental resources, benefits and services to meet basic human needs and ensure human well-being must be pursued and special measures may be taken to ensure access thereto by categories of persons disadvantaged by unfair 30 discrimination.
- (e) Responsibility for the environmental health and safety consequences of a policy, programme, project, product, process, service or activity exists throughout its life cycle.
- (f) The participation of all interested and affected parties in environmental governance must be promoted, and all people must have the opportunity to develop the 35 understanding, skills and capacity necessary for achieving equitable and effective participation, and participation by vulnerable and disadvantaged persons must be ensured.
- (g) Decisions must take into account the interests, needs and values of all interested and affected parties, and this includes recognizing all forms of knowledge, including 40 traditional and ordinary knowledge.
- (h) Community wellbeing and empowerment must be promoted through environmental education, the raising of environmental awareness, the sharing of knowledge and experience and other appropriate means.
- (i) The social, economic and environmental impacts of activities, including 45 disadvantages and benefits, must be considered, assessed and evaluated, and decisions must be appropriate in the light of such consideration and assessment.
- (j) The right of workers to refuse work that is harmful to human health or the environment and to be informed of dangers must be respected and protected.
- (k) Decisions must be taken in an open and transparent manner, and access to 50 information must be provided in accordance with the law.
- (l) There must be intergovernmental co-ordination and harmonisation of policies, legislation and actions relating to the environment.
- (m) Actual or potential conflicts of interest between organs of state should be 55 resolved through conflict resolution procedures.
- (n) Global and international responsibilities relating to the environment must be (discharged in the national interest).
- (o) The environment is held in public trust for the people, the beneficial use of environmental resources must serve the public interest and the environment must be 60 protected as the people's common heritage.

(p) The costs of remedying pollution, environmental degradation and consequent adverse health effects and of preventing, controlling or minimizing further pollution, environmental damage or adverse health effects must be paid for by those responsible for harming the environment.

(q) The vital role of women and youth in environmental management and development must be recognised and their full participation therein must be promoted.

(r) Sensitive, vulnerable, highly dynamic or stressed ecosystems, such as coastal shores, estuaries, wetlands, and similar systems require specific attention in management and planning procedures, especially where they are subject to significant human resource usage and development pressure.

MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL, MANAGEMENT BILL

General background and overview

1. The Bill seeks to give effect to the management policy laid down in the White Paper on Environmental Management Policy approved by Cabinet. The most important feature of the White Paper on Environmental Management Policy is its emphasis on the principle of co-operative governance to ensure that the environmental rights in the Constitution are protected and fulfilled. The Bill employs a number of instruments to promote and give effect to co-operative governance as envisaged in section 41(2) of the Constitution.

2. The role of the Department of Environmental Affairs and Tourism as lead agent in exercising Government's custodianship of the environment must be effective and compatible with the constitutional allocation of powers. The Bill therefore acknowledges both primary policy and decision-making roles for specialised sectoral national departments, and the limits on national environmental management flowing from the constitutional allocation of powers.

3. The Department of Environmental Affairs has embarked on a comprehensive and integrated programme of environmental law reform. The Environmental Law Reform Programme consists of about 10 individual law reform projects that cover the entire spectrum of environmental legislation. The topics of these projects range from umbrella framework legislation, i.e. the National Environmental Management Bill, to sectoral legislation such as the already completed Marine Living Resources Act, and various other proposed bills on for example pollution and waste management, coastal management and biodiversity conservation. The National Environmental Management Bill defines environmental management and governance in South Africa and provides the legal framework for sectoral laws.

Chapter by chapter analysis

4. Following the customary definitions clause, the Bill starts off in Chapter I by declaring the principles to be adhered to by all spheres of government in managing the environment. For example, it is stated that natural and cultural resources must be managed and utilised on a sustainable basis for the benefit of current and future generations. Another principle declares that public participation in decision-making affecting the environment must be promoted and facilitated. These principles are derived from the White Paper and were developed in the Consultative National Environmental Policy Process (CONNEPP).

5. Chapter 2 introduces the institutions the Bill seeks to establish, and sets out the usual 'provisions relating to institutions, such as their composition, conditions for appointment, meetings, funding, staff etc. The bodies to be established are the National Environmental Advisory Forum and the Committee for Environmental Co-ordination. The rationale for the creation of the Forum is to place at the disposal of the Minister of Environmental Affairs and Tourism a forum comprising of a well-balanced mixture of representatives which shall inform the Minister of the views of interested and affected parties. The principal role of the Committee is to manage the fragmented performance of environmental functions by various government departments at both the horizontal and vertical levels of government, in order to promote and ensure integration and co-ordination regarding the implementation of environmental policies by Government. The mechanism for such co-ordination is to be found in the environmental implementation plans referred to below. Provision is also made for investigating and establishing a single point in each province for handling in applications for authorisations and licences, and the co-ordinated consideration of applications by all organs of state.

6. Chapter 3 deals with distribution and sharing of functions between national government departments and provincial departments. Instruments for co-ordination and alignment of functions proposed will be by means of environmental implementation plans and environmental management plans. The purpose of these will be to spell out how various departments will ensure that their policies, plans and programmes and the exercise of their powers that may affect the environment, will comply with the principles and national norms and standards that have as their object the protection of the environment. These instruments will make it possible to give effect to the White Paper's vision of the Department of Environmental Affairs and Tourism as an environmental lead agent which respects the functional responsibilities of the national departments and the constitutional powers of provinces. They will be mechanisms through which the overlapping responsibilities of different national departments and the various spheres of government can be dealt with in a co-operative manner that reflects the need for both flexibility and predictability. The handling of any disagreements with provinces and local authorities, and between national departments are dealt with in compliance with the Constitution. The chapter further makes it possible to phase in compliance with the provision for environmental implementation plans and management plans in order to accommodate capacity constraints in Government. There must be guidelines for, and assistance with, the preparation of plans and they may form part of other planning processes.

7. Chapter 4 provides for a system of conflict management and fair decision-making by providing for a clear procedure which, while facilitating the use of conciliation, arbitration, mediation, investigation, and public access to such procedures, leaves the final decision in the hands of the province or department to whom a function was entrusted by law, subject, of course, to the normal recourse to the courts. It is proposed that the Director-General may appoint a conciliator acceptable to the parties to a dispute to resolve the dispute, for example by mediating, by fact-finding, or by making a recommendation to the parties.

8. Chapter 5 deals with the topic of environmental assessment and integrated environmental management. The main object is to integrate principles of environmental management into the planning and development process and to identify, predict and evaluate the effects which policies, programmed, proposals or projects may have on the environment. The Bill here seeks to create a system that complies with the constitutional allocation of powers and current line Ministry responsibility by making it possible for provinces and other Departments to conduct an assessment system within their areas of jurisdiction and to co-operate where appropriate. The proliferation of environmental assessment procedures where activities fall under the jurisdiction of more than one organ of state is prevented and the protection of sensitive environments is secured. Recognition is given to the development and phased introduction into law of integrated environmental management procedures. Assistance to other organs of state to achieve the objectives of integrated environmental management, includes training, the development of manuals and guidelines, and the coordination of procedure. In the interest of certainty and effectiveness this Chapter lays down minimum requirements with which all integrated environmental systems must comply.

9. Chapter 6 (International Obligations and Agreements) sets out a procedure for giving effect to international agreements to which the Republic is a party and where necessary the enactment of an agreement into law by national legislation.

10. In Chapter 7 "Compliance and Enforcement" is addressed. The Bill seeks to broaden the locus standi along the lines of section 38 of the Constitution so that any person may approach a competent court for relief in respect of any breach or threatened breach of any provision of law concerned with the protection of the environment or the utilisation of natural resources. The Bill further provides for private criminal prosecutions by any person acting in the public interest or in the interest of the environment. The courts are authorised to make appropriate cost orders. Provision is made for access to environmental information, and whistle-blowers are protected. In addition, provision is made for a general duty of care on every citizen, the rehabilitation and remediation of environmental damage and control of emergency incidents. The right of workers to refuse to perform environmentally hazardous work is recognized and regulated.

11. Chapter 8 provides that the Minister and every provincial government and local authority may enter into environmental management co-operation agreements with any person or community for the purpose of promoting compliance with the principles laid down in the Bill. To be valid, such an agreement requires the concurrence of the level of government or other organ of state which is responsible for the activity or geographical area affected by the agreement. This chapter also defines the content of an agreement.

12. Chapter 9, under the heading "Administration of t.et", contains various powers or duties of the Minister or Director-General, for example expropriation of property, reservation of State land for environmental purposes, agreements with other organs of state, delegations, the making of regulations, etc.

13. The last Chapter (Chapter 10) sets out general and transitional provisions, including repeal of laws, savings, short title and commencement. As far as repeals are concerned, the Bill seeks to replace the greater part of the Environment Conservation Act, 1989 (Act No. 73 of 1989). After its partial repeal, this Act will chiefly only provide for various kinds of protected areas and aspects of waste management.

Effect on the provinces and local government

14. The Bill will have the following implications for the provinces and local government:

- 14.1 The authorities within provinces and local government that are charged with environment-related functions are required to observe and adhere to the principles set out in Chapter 1 (paragraph 4 above).
- 14.2 The provincial heads of the Department dealing with environmental matters may be members of the Committee for environmental co-ordination (see paragraph 5 above, dealing with Chapter 2).
- 14.3 Provinces will be required to draw up environmental implementation plans (Chapter 3, see paragraph 6 above).
- 14.4 Provincial authorities will be required to adhere to minimum standards in developing integrated environmental management procedures (Chapter 5, paragraph 8 above).
- 14.5 Provincial governments and local authorities may take action in emergency incidents by directing the responsible person to undertake specific measures. If the person fails to comply, the authority concerned may itself take action and claim reimbursement of all reasonable cost, from the responsible person. (Chapter 7, paragraph 10 above).
- 14.6 Provincial governments and local authorities may enter into environmental management co-operation agreements with any person or community for the purpose of promoting compliance with the principles laid down in the Bill (Chapter 8, paragraph 11 above).
- 14.7 The Director-General may enter into agreements with provincial departments and local authorities in order to fulfil his or her obligations (Clause 41).
- 14.8 Clause 42 provides that the Minister and the Director-General may delegate functions to a provincial government or local authority.
- 14.9 Clause 46 requires the Minister to support local authorities by promulgating model bylaws which they may adopt.

Other departments and bodies consulted

15. All national departments and provincial governments were consulted. The draft Bill was published in the Gazette in terms of section 154 of the Constitution.

16. In the opinion of the Department of Environmental Affairs and Tourism and the State Law Advisers this Bill should be dealt with in accordance with the procedure established by section 76 of the Constitution, as it falls within a functional area listed in Schedule 4 to the Constitution, namely "Environment".
