BILL

To modify the customary law of succession so as to provide for the devolution of certain property in terms of the law of intestate succession; to clarify certain matters relating to the law of succession and the law of property in relation to persons subject to customary law; and to amend certain laws in this regard; and to provide for matters connected therewith.

PREAMBLE

SINCE a widow in a customary marriage whose husband dies intestate does not enjoy adequate protection and benefit under the customary law of succession;

AND SINCE certain children born out of a customary marriage do not enjoy adequate protection under customary law;

AND SINCE section 9 of the Constitution provides that everyone has the right to equal protection and benefit of the law;

AND SINCE social circumstances have so changed that the customary law of succession no longer provides adequately for the welfare of family members;

AND SINCE the Constitutional Court has declared that the principle of male primogeniture, as applied in the customary law of succession, cannot be reconciled with the current notions of equality and human dignity as contained in the Bill of Rights,

Parliament of the Republic of South Africa therefore enacts as follows:—

(2) In the application of the Intestate Succession Act—

- (a) where the person referred to in subsection (1) is survived by a spouse, as well as a descendant, such a spouse must inherit a child’s portion of the intestate estate or so much of the intestate estate as does not exceed in value the amount fixed from time to time by the Cabinet member responsible for the administration of justice by notice in the Gazette, whichever is the greater;

Dispute or uncertainty in consequence of nature of customary law

MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE REFORM OF CUSTOMARY LAW OF SUCCESSION AND REGULATION OF RELATED MATTERS BILL, 2008

1. PURPOSE OF BILL AND BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The Bill emanates from an investigation and report of the South African Law Reform Commission (SALRC). The purpose of the Bill is—

- (i) to abolish the customary rule of primogeniture in as far as it applies to the law of succession in order to bring it in line with the Constitution; and
- (ii) to give effect to the judgment of the Constitutional Court in the case of Bhe and Others v The Magistrate, Khayelitsha and Others CCT 49/03, Shibi v Sithole and Others CCT 69/03, which declared the principle of male primogeniture incompatible with the Bill of Rights.

2. OBJECTS OF BILL

2.1 Clause 2(1) extends the application of the Intestate Succession Act, 1987 (Act No. 81 of 1987), to deceased estates of Africans who die intestate. These estates were previously dealt with in terms of the repealed Black Administration Act, 1927. Clause 2(2) deals with the different scenarios which present themselves in terms of customary law and how the Intestate Succession Act, 1987, must be applied in these scenarios, for instance how the variety of supporting marital unions in customary law must be dealt with. In terms of the Intestate Succession Act, 1987 (Act No. 81 of 1987), children born out of unions entered into by or on behalf of males and those entered into by women for purposes of raising children or increasing the number of off-spring of the deceased do not qualify to inherit the intestate estates of their fathers because they are regarded as extra-marital children. Clause 2(2) entitles a woman who has entered into a union with a man for the purpose of providing children and a woman who has entered into a union with another woman so that the latter woman can provide children, to be regarded as a descendant for the purposes of the application of the Intestate Succession Act, 1987.

2.2 Clause 3 seeks to provide how the Intestate Succession Act is to be interpreted in order to give effect to provisions proposed in the Bill.

2.3 Clause 4(1) provides for the property accruing to a woman or her house under customary law by virtue of her customary marriage to devolve in terms of a will. (If she dies without a will, her property will devolve in terms of the Intestate Succession Act, 1987.) In terms of clause 4(2) any reference in a will of such a woman to a “child” and any reference in section 1 of the Intestate Succession Act to a “descendant” in relation to such a woman who dies without a will, must be interpreted to include any child born out of any ancillary union entered into in terms of customary law for the purpose of providing children for such a woman or her house.

2.4 Clause 5 contains procedures for resolving disputes and uncertainties pertaining to the devolution of family property, among others. Disputes or uncertainties in connection with the devolution of family property will be determined by the Master of the High Court having jurisdiction. The Master may also refer a matter to a magistrate who must hold an inquiry into the matter and make recommendations to the Master.

2.5 Clause 6 excludes succession to property held by a traditional leader in his or her official capacity on behalf of a traditional community from the application of the Intestate Succession Act, 1987. This property will remain subject to customary law.

2.6 Clause 7 is a savings clause and deals with the following matter: Before 2 December 1988 a man married by customary law could enter into a civil marriage with another woman, thereby dissolving the customary marriage. The Marriage and Matrimonial Property Law Amendment Act, 1988 (Act No. 3 of 1988), which came into effect on 2 December 1988, prohibits customary marriage spouses from concluding civil marriages, except with each other. Clause 7 provides that, in the event of the death of a husband who has entered into a civil marriage before 2 December 1988 with a woman other than the customary law spouse, the customary law spouse and the issue of the customary marriage must inherit on par with the civil marriage widow and the issue from that marriage.

2.7 Clause 8 refers to a Schedule in which the provisions of the Administration of Estates Act, 1965, the Intestate Succession Act, 1987, and the Maintenance of Surviving Spouses Act, 1990, are amended consequentially, as a result of the provisions of the Bill.

2.8 Clause 9 contains the short title and commencement provisions.

3. DEPARTMENTS/BODIES/PERSONS CONSULTED

The SALRC published a Discussion Paper which was widely distributed and which elicited comments from a variety of interested parties, including prominent non-governmental and community-based organisations concerned with women's issues and customary law regarding the envisaged legislation. A series of workshops were also held which were attended, among others, by traditional leaders in all the provinces. A follow-up consultative meeting of expert role-players was also held during which the Bill was discussed. The SALRC's consultation process was comprehensive and extensive.
