 - (b) if Parliament is not then in session, within 30 days after the next session starts.”.

Short title

18. This Act is the National Forest and Fire Laws Amendment Act, 2001.

MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE NATIONAL FOREST AND FIRE LAWS AMENDMENT BILL, 2001

The National Forest and Fire Laws Amendment Bill, 2001, is introduced for the purpose of amending and effectively implementing the—

- (a) National Forest Act, 1998 (Act No. 84 of 1998); and
 - (b) National Veld and Forest Fire Act, 1998 (Act No. 101 of 1998),
- which were promulgated in 1998.

The National Forests Act, 1998

1. The definitions of “State land” and “trust forest” are not adequate. The amendment of the definition of “State land” is proposed so as to allow for land transferred to communities to remain a state forest in terms of a joint management agreement. The amendment of the definition of “trust forest” recognises that the boundaries of state forests have changed over time.

2. The present position is that only trees may be protected, but not their produce or products. The Bill seeks to prevent people from freely dealing in produce or products of protected trees or species.

3. The Act failed to take into account contracts between licensees and third parties. In those cases the contractor should not be expected to pay an additional licence fee. A further method of exempting people from paying licence fees is sought to be added, viz. the Minister may refrain from fixing a fee.

4. The granting of mining rights in state forests is now made subject to the stringent requirements of section 3.

5. Long-term supply contracts are terminable on a notice of five years. This does not take into account renewable contracts. Now the five years includes the periods of renewal. Once-off sales were overlooked and provision is now made for them.

6. The Minister may, in terms of the Act, reserve state land for forestry. However, this land is currently under the control of different Ministers and other authorities. The amendment sets out those authorities whose concurrence the Minister must seek before he may reserve the land.

7. When regulations under the Act would come into effect has not been made clear and has caused disagreement. The Bill seeks to rectify this by introducing a simpler and clearer procedure. Tariffs may be levied for forest products or forest produce sold by the Department. Further tariffs are now being introduced, viz. those for produce or products sold by other organs of state and for services rendered by employees of the Department.

The National Veld and Forest Fire Act, 1998

1. The Act provides for cooperation between fire protection associations, but only in cases where fires cross the boundaries of those associations. This is too limiting and the Bill now provides for such cooperation in all cases.

2. Fire fighting is a specialised activity and municipal fire officers can render a valuable service in the event of forest fires. However, they cannot be compelled to perform these functions, as the Act compels them to. So the Bill now makes provision for the officers to make themselves available voluntarily. It is impracticable to require a fire danger rating system to take into account all the matters mentioned in the Act as this may not always be possible. The element of reasonableness is now introduced.

3. Similarly the Bill streamlines the procedure for the promulgation of regulations under this Act.

Parliamentary procedure

The Department of Water Affairs and Forestry and the State Law Advisers are of the opinion that the procedure provided for in section 76 of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1996 (Act No. 108 of 1996), should be followed with regard to this Bill. This is an amendment Bill to legislation which falls within the functional areas listed in Schedule 4 of the Constitution, namely “Administration of indigenous forests”, “Environment” and “Nature conservation”.
