Short title and commencement

27. This Act is the General Intelligence Law Amendment Act, 2000, and comes into operation on a date fixed by the President by proclamation in the Gazette.

MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE GENERAL INTELLIGENCE LAW AMENDMENT BILL, 2000

The Intelligence Services Act, 1994 (Act No. 38 of 1994), establishes the National Intelligence Agency and the South African Secret Service.

The Intelligence Services are excluded from the application of labour legislation applicable to the Public Service and the private sector. It is therefore imperative to apply labour legislation to guide the Intelligence Services in the formulation of their own legislation and internal policies.

Accordingly, Intelligence legislation has to be amended to give effect to the changes brought about by labour legislation.

The Bill creates internal mechanisms with a view to fair labour practices and proper consultation on the conditions of service within the Intelligence Services.

The Bill regulates the activities of former members of the Intelligence Services, and empowers the Minister to make regulations, which will determine how former members must conduct themselves without harming the interests of the Intelligence Services and national security.

The National Strategic Intelligence Act, 1994 (Act No. 39 of 1994), is amended to give the Minister the power to make regulations which will deal with the protection of sensitive information belonging to the state, which is in the possession of all government departments and parastatals. This is in keeping with the Minimum Information Security Standards policy approved by Cabinet in 1997.

The objects of the Bill are—

- (i) to align the Intelligence Services legislation with the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1996 (Act No. 108 of 1996), hereinafter referred to as “the Constitution”;
- (ii) to align the disciplinary code and the conditions of service of the Intelligence Services with the new labour law trends;
- (iii) to make provision for the regulation of strikes in the Intelligence Services,
- (iv) to create consultation forums to deal with conditions of service and grievances; and
- (v) to regulate the activities of former members of the Intelligence Services.
