MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE CRIMINAL LAW
AMENDMENT BILL, 1997

1. Section 276(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (Act No. 51 of 1977) ("the Act"), authorises a court of law in principle to impose the sentence of death, whilst sections 277, 278 and 279 deal with the crimes for which and the circumstances under which [the sentence of death can be imposed, the imposition of the sentence of death upon a pregnant woman and the execution of the sentence of death, respectively. Furthermore, the Defence Act, 1957 (Act No. 44 of 1957), authorises a court martial to impose the sentence of death for offences which endanger the safety of the Forces.

2. Section 11 of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1996 (Act No. 108 of 1996), provides that everyone has the right to life, whilst section 12(1)(d) and (e) provides that everyone has the right not to be tortured in any way, and not to be treated or punished in a cruel, inhuman or degrading way.

3. The Constitutional Court, in S v Makwanyane and Another 1995(3) SA 391 (CC), had to decide whether the death penalty is consistent with the provisions of the previous Constitution. Such provisions were similar to the provisions mentioned in paragraph 2 supra. The President of the Constitutional Court, Mr Justice A Chaskalson, stated inter alia the following (at 451 G-I):

"Taking these factors into account, as well as the elements of arbitrariness and the possibility of error in enforcing the death penalty, the clear and convincing case that is required to justify the death sentence as a penalty for murder has not been made out. The requirements of section 33(1) have accordingly not been satisfied, and it follows that the provisions of section 277(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act 51 of 1977 must be held to be inconsistent with section 11(2) of the Constitution."

The following order was made by the Court at 455A-C:

"1. In terms of section 98(5) of the Constitution, and with effect from the date of this order, the provisions of paragraphs (a), (c), (d), (e) and (f) of section 277(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, and all corresponding provisions of other legislation sanctioning capital punishment which are in force in any part of the national territory in terms of section 229, are declared to be inconsistent with the Constitution and, accordingly, to be invalid.

2. In terms of section 98(7) of the Constitution, and with effect from the date of this order:

- (a) the State is and all its organs are forbidden to execute any person already sentenced to death under any of the provisions thus declared to be invalid; and
- (b) all such persons will remain in custody under the sentences imposed on them until such sentences have been set aside in accordance with law and substituted by lawful punishment."

Consequently the main objects of the Bill are to repeal or amend all statutory provisions in terms of which the sentence of death may be imposed and to effect the necessary consequential amendments to related provisions.

4. Clause 1 of the Bill seeks to create a mechanism in terms of which the sentences of all persons under the sentence of death can be substituted. Provision is made for the cases of such persons to be remitted to the trial courts for the imposition of appropriate sentences in lieu of the sentence of death. Any sentence so imposed shall be deemed, for the purpose of any further appeal and all other purposes, to be the sentence imposed on the convicted person at his or her trial. Clause 1 furthermore provides for the powers of, and the procedure to be followed by, the trial courts.

5. Clauses 2 to 19 seek to amend or repeal provisions of the Defence Act, 1957, which, inter alia, provide for the imposition of the sentence of death by a court martial and matters related thereto.

6. The Correctional Services Act, 1959 (Act No. 8 of 1959), also contains provisions in which reference to the sentence of death is made. Clauses 20 to 24 purport to repeal or amend those provisions.

7. References to the sentence of death are contained in—

- (i) the Mental Health Act, 1973 (Act No. 18 of 1973);
- (ii) the Government Service Pension Act, 1973 (Act No. 57 of 1973); and
- (iii) the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1988 (Act No. 1 of 1988).

Clauses 25, 26 and 47 seek to amend these Acts by the deletion of such references.

8. Substantive provisions pertaining to the sentence of death are also found in the following Acts:

- (a) Section 3 of the Second General Law Amendment Act, 1974 (Act No. 94 of 1974), which provides for the carrying out of death sentences passed by certain courts.
- (b) Sections 19 and 20 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1990 (Act No. 107 of 1990), providing, inter alia, for the reconsideration of sentences of certain persons under the sentence of death.
- (c) Section 19 of the General Law Amendment Act, 1992 (Act No. 139 of 1992), providing for an appeal by the Minister of Justice on behalf of certain persons sentenced to death.

Clauses 27, 48 and 50 purport to repeal the above sections.

9. Clause 28 proposes an amendment of section 18 of the Act in order to provide that the right to institute a prosecution in respect of an offence for which the sentence of death could previously have been imposed, shall not be barred by lapse of time.

10. Clauses 29 to 46 purport to either repeal or amend provisions of the Act pertaining to the sentence of death and related matters. Provisions which are repealed relate to, inter alia, the imposition of the sentence of death, the crimes for and the circumstances under which the sentence of death may be imposed, the imposition of the sentence of death on pregnant women, the execution of the sentence of death, appeal against a sentence of death, submissions by the Minister of Justice to the Supreme Court of Appeal on behalf of certain persons sentenced to death, petitions to the President to extend mercy to a person under the sentence of death and the President's power to commute sentences of death.

11. Clause 51 seeks to repeal or amend provisions similar to the above-mentioned which, in terms of the Constitution, 1996, are still in force in the areas of the former Republics of Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda.

12. In clause 52 it is proposed that a regional court or a High Court, on convicting a person of certain proposed offences, must impose a compulsory minimum sentence. The proposed offences are categorised in two parts according to the seriousness thereof. Provision is, however, made for the imposition of lighter sentences in which case the presiding officer must note the reasons for not imposing the prescribed sentence. In clause 53 it is proposed that clause 52 shall cease to be of force after the expiry of two years. However, the President, with the concurrence of Parliament, may extend it for one year at a time.
