MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE JUDICIAL MATTERS AMENDMENT BILL, 2008

1. PURPOSE OF BILL

The purpose of the Judicial Matters Amendment Bill, 2008 (“the Bill”) is to amend numerous provisions in various Acts administered by the Department of Justice and Constitutional Development (“the Department”), which do not require individual amendment Acts. This Memorandum provides the reasons for the amendments, most of which are straight forward and not contentious, as is traditionally the case with amendments in such an omnibus Bill. While some amendments in the Bill are straight forward, there are others which require an explanation, as set out below:

2. OBJECTS OF BILL

2.1 Clause 1: Amendment of section 113 of the General Law Amendment Act, 1935 (Act 46 of 1935):

Section 113 of the General Law Amendment Act, 1935, criminalises the act of disposing of a newly born child’s body with the intention of concealing the birth of the child, irrespective of whether the child died before, during or after birth. The Women’s Legal Centre argues that these provisions are overly broad, lacking in definition, archaic and their constitutional validity is questionable, often impinging on the right to human dignity of women charged under it. The amendments contained in clause 1 address the evidentiary burden of proof that is placed on accused persons, bringing it in line with constitutional jurisprudence. As a safety mechanism, the clause also requires a Director of Public Prosecutions to authorise a prosecution in terms of the section.

2.2 Clause 2: Amendment of section 88 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1965 (Act 66 of 1965):

Clause 2 is intended to amend section 88 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1965, which deals with the payment of interest on certain moneys held in the guardians’ fund. In terms of this section interest on moneys held in the guardians’ fund only becomes available at the end of the financial year, which is 31 March of every year. This method of compounding interest annually is prejudicial to beneficiaries who have to wait for a year before they can receive the interest on the money held in trust. The amendment provides that the interest be compounded on a monthly basis. The proposed method of calculating the interest is intended to bring the calculation of interest into line with the methods used by commercial institutions. This section still refers to the term “lunatic”. The amendment brings this unacceptable terminology in line with the terminology used in the Mental Health Care Act, 2002 (Act 17 of 2002). Because the amendment deals with a matter relating to the administration of justice, the amendment also replaces the role of the Minister of Finance with the Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development in determining the rate of interest. The amendment proposes that the Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development does this in consultation with the Minister of Finance.

2.3 Clause 3: Amendment of section 1 of the Medicines and Related Substances Act, 1965 (Act 101 of 1965):

The amendment corrects an incorrect word in the Afrikaans text.

2.4 Clause 4: Amendment of section 51 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (Act 51 of 1977):

This amendment replaces references to the repealed Prisons Act, 1959, with references to the prevailing provisions of the Correctional Services Act, 1998 (Act 111 of 1998).

2.5 Clauses 5, 6, 7, 8, 17 and 39: Amendment of sections 55, 56, 57, 57A and 341 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (Act 51 of 1977):

- (i) The provisions in the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (the Criminal Procedure Act), which regulate the setting and payment of admission of guilt fines, most notably section 57, allow prosecutors and clerks of courts (by way of a summons as provided for in section 54 of that Act) and peace officers (by way of a written notice as provided for in section 56 of that Act), to set admission of guilt fines in certain circumstances. Section 57(5) of the Act, authorises the magistrate of every magisterial district to set specific amounts to be paid as admission of guilt fines in respect of specific offences in the magisterial district in question, from which prosecutors, clerks of court and peace officers may not deviate.
- (ii) The effect of these provisions is that different amounts for admission of guilt fines for similar offences apply in different parts of the country. This might constitute an infringement of section 9 of the Constitution which guarantees everyone the right to the equal protection and benefit of the law. These provisions might also infringe the principle of the separation of powers, as envisaged in the Constitution, since it entitles members of the judiciary (magistrates) to make law, which, in terms of the Constitution, is a legislative function. The question is also raised whether it is appropriate for clerks of court to set admission of guilt fines, as sanctioned by the existing provisions in this regard.
- (iii) Clause 7 amends section 57 of the Criminal Procedure Act and clauses 5, 6, 8, and 17 amend sections 55, 56, 57A, and 341, consequentially. In short, the amendments—
 - (a) empower the Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development to determine, by notice in the Gazette, the offences in respect of which admission of guilt fines may be set and the amounts payable in respect of each of the offences so determined;
 - (b) provide that prosecutors may only endorse summonses with admission of guilt fines in respect of the offences determined by the Minister, in accordance with national directives issued by the National Director of Public Prosecutions; and
 - (c) take away the power of magistrates to determine admission of guilt fines for their magisterial districts, and the power of clerks of court to set admission of guilt fines.

Clause 39 contains transitional arrangements, dealing with admission of guilt fines which are imposed before the commencement of the above amendments and which are not finalised by the time the amendments come into operation.

2.6 Clause 9: Amendment of section 60 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (Act 51 of 1977):

- (i) Clause 9 is aimed at amending section 60 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977, which deals with the bail application of an accused person in court. It is intended to address the problem of prison overcrowding, one of the causes thereof being the huge number of awaiting-trial prisoners. Many of these awaiting-trial persons have been granted bail, but are still in detention because they cannot afford the sum of money set by the court as a condition of being released on bail.
- (ii) It has been argued that if a court has come to the conclusion that an accused person can be released on bail because it is satisfied that the interests of justice so permit, the court should then endeavour to facilitate release on bail and, to this end, should hold a separate inquiry to determine the ability of the accused person to pay the sum of money that the court intends setting as a condition for release or, in the event of the accused not being able to afford any sum of money, to consider alternative conditions for release on bail. Clause 9 seeks to build in such an inquiry.
- (iii) Clause 9 also allows bail money to be paid at any magistrate's court or any High Court in the country, and not only at the court where the accused person is appearing, which is the case in terms of the existing bail provisions.

2.7 Clause 10: Amendment of section 79 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (Act 51 of 1977):

- (i) Section 79 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977, in the case of serious offences (murder, culpable homicide, rape or another charge involving serious violence), or where the court considers it to be necessary in the public interest, or where the court, in any particular case so directs, requires a panel of three psychiatrists to be appointed for purposes of inquiring into the capacity of an accused person to understand the criminal proceedings pending against him or her or into the criminal capacity of an accused person, where mental capacity is an issue. In the case of less serious offences, only one person is required to undertake the investigation.
- (ii) The section is almost impossible to apply in some parts of the country (mainly Gauteng) due to the non-availability of private psychiatrists willing to do observations. As a result of these problems, serious cases have been struck off the roll because proper observations could not be done. This clause will allow the courts to do away with the third psychiatrist, at the request of the prosecutor, who may only so request in accordance with directives issued by the National Director of Public Prosecutions. The NDPP must, in terms of the proposed amendments, issue directives, setting out the cases and circumstances in which a prosecutor may make a request of this nature.

2.8 Clause 11: Insertion of new section 110A in the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (Act 51 of 1977):

Clause 11 inserts a new section 110A in the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977, in order to confer jurisdiction on South African courts to try offences committed by South African officials while they are on diplomatic duty abroad, and who cannot be prosecuted in the foreign country due to diplomatic immunity. Clause 11 confers jurisdiction on South African courts to try these cases if the offence committed abroad is also an offence in South Africa, and the NDPP instructs that a prosecution must be instituted.

2.9 Clause 12: Amendment of section 285 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (Act 51 of 1977):

In terms of section 285(4)(a), a person commits an offence if he or she fails to report at a correctional facility for the first time to serve a term of periodical imprisonment. However, no mechanism exists to deal with a person who initially reports for periodical imprisonment, but who fails to report at a later stage. Clause 12 empowers any court to re-consider the sentence of periodical imprisonment where a person appears before it, having failed to report for periodical imprisonment. It will be more effective to alter the sentence of periodical imprisonment, rather than to have a new trial where the person is charged for failure to report for periodical imprisonment. This provision is similar to section 276A(4) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977, which deals with correctional supervision.

2.10 Clauses 13, 14, 15 and 16: Amendment of sections 309, 309C, 315 and 316 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 (Act 51 of 1977):

- (i) Sections 309, 309B, 309C and 309D of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977, regulate appeals by persons in criminal proceedings from the lower courts to the High Courts. In terms of these provisions, an appeal is subject to leave to appeal being granted by the trial court, failing which the appellant may petition the Judge President of the High Court having jurisdiction.
- (ii) In the case of Shinga vs the State and Others, the Constitutional Court found the following provisions to be unconstitutional for the reasons given hereunder:
 - (a) Section 309(3A): This subsection provides that an appeal must be disposed of by a High Court in chambers on the written argument of the parties or their legal representatives, unless the Court is of the opinion that the interests of justice require that the parties or their legal representatives submit oral argument to the Court. It, however, also provides that even if the Court is of the opinion that oral argument is necessary, written argument in chambers will suffice if the parties or their legal representatives so request and the Judge President in question so agrees. The Constitutional Court held this provision to be unconstitutional, remarking that “[a] fair appeal must require that every accused and the prosecution be given an opportunity to advance their case in every reasonable way they can. To deny the accused or the prosecution the right to present oral argument in open court is fundamentally unfair bearing in mind the importance of oral argument as a significant tool in the hands of both an accused and the prosecution in the appeal process”. Clause 13 addresses this finding of the Constitutional Court by deleting section 309(3A). Clause 15 does likewise in respect of criminal appeals from the High Court to the Supreme Court of Appeal by deleting section 315(1)(b) and (c) which contains similar provisions to section 309(3A).

- (b) Section 309C(4): This subsection provides that where leave to appeal has been refused and the appellant petitions the Judge President in question, the clerk of the magistrate’s court must submit the full record of the proceedings in the trial court (subsection (4)(c)). However, the proviso to subsection (4)(c) provides that the full record of the proceedings in the trial court need not be given if the accused was tried in a regional court and was legally represented at the trial. The Constitutional Court was of the view “that the record of the case should as a matter of course be placed before the petition judges on the basis that an adequate reappraisal is not possible without the record”. It went on further to comment that once this is accepted as sound, there is no basis for the suggestion that an adequate review is possible without the record in relation to each category posed by the exceptions. It held that these exceptions were unconstitutional. Clause 14 consequently deletes these exceptions. Clause 16 does likewise in respect of criminal appeals from the High Court to the Supreme Court of Appeal by amending section 316(10) and (12), which contains similar provisions to section 309C(4) and (6).
- (c) Section 309C(5): This subsection provides that the petition must be considered by a single judge designated by the Judge President who may, in exceptional circumstances, designate two judges. If there is a difference of opinion in the case of two judges, the Judge President, or another judge designated by the Judge President, must also consider the petition. The Constitutional Court concluded that the constitutional requirement for an adequate reappraisal of the record requires two judges to consider the record even for petitions for leave to appeal from the Magistrates’ Court. Clause 14 also addresses this in section 309C(5). The amendments to subsection 309C(6) are consequential in nature.

2.11 Clause 18: Amendment of section 3 of the Attorneys Act, 1979 (Act 53 of 1979):

The Attorneys Act, 1979, envisages attorneys employed at offices of the Legal Aid Board engaging candidate attorneys. However, section 3 of the Attorneys Act, 1979, which specifies the persons who may engage candidate attorneys, erroneously did not include attorneys employed at offices of the Legal Aid Board. Clause 18 rectifies this omission by ensuring that attorneys employed by the Board are entitled to engage candidate attorneys.

2.12 Clause 19: Amendment of section 72 of the Attorneys Act, 1979 (Act 53 of 1979):

Clause 19 seeks to amend section 72 of this Act in order to increase fines which may be imposed by the council of a law society which finds an attorney or candidate attorney guilty of unprofessional conduct. It is suggested that the maximum fines be increased from R10 000 to R100 000 in the case of attorneys and from R2 000 to R20 000 in the case of candidate attorneys. These maximum fines were last adjusted in 1993. The increased fines will ensure greater protection to members of the public.

2.13 Clause 20: Amendment of section 3 of the Admiralty Jurisdiction Regulation Act, 1983 (Act 105 of 1983):

- (i) Section 3 of this Act envisages two categories of legal actions, namely actions in personam and actions in rem. An action in rem may only be instituted by the arrest of certain property in respect of which the claim lies, for instance a ship

(section 3(5)). Section 3(6), however, provides that, in the case of an action in rem, the action does not necessarily have to be instituted by the arrest of the ship which gave rise to the claim. It may be instituted by the arrest of an “associated ship”. An “associated ship” includes another ship owned by the person or the company who or which was also the owner of the ship that gave rise to the maritime claim. Section 3(9), however, gives the Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development the power to exclude certain ships from these “associated ship arrest provisions” as set out in section 3(6), by way of notice in the Gazette. Section 3(9) was enacted in order to protect South African shipowners and was used to circumvent sanctions.

- (ii) These provisions were enacted before the new constitutional dispensation and, more particularly section 9(1) of the Constitution, which entrenches the principle that everyone is equal before the law and has the right to the equal protection and benefit of the law. Clause 20 intends bringing this section into line with Constitutional imperatives and removes the Minister’s arbitrary power to elevate certain persons above the law.

2.14 Clause 21: Amendment of section 18 of the Matrimonial Property Act, 1984 (Act 88 of 1984):

In Van der Merwe v The Road Accident Fund and Others, the Constitutional Court declared section 18(b) of the Matrimonial Property Act, 1984 (Act 88 of 1984), to be inconsistent with the equality clause of the Constitution and therefore invalid. This section permits a spouse married in community of property to recover damages from the other spouse in respect of bodily injuries caused by that spouse but not damages for patrimonial loss. The Court ordered that patrimonial damages must become the separate property of the injured spouse which he or she is entitled to recover. Clause 21 is intended to give effect to this judgment.

2.15 Clause 22: Amendment of Schedule 2 to the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1997 (Act 105 of 1997):

- (i) Discretionary minimum sentences, as envisaged in terms of section 51 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1997, are only provided for in respect of a small number of serious offences and in each case the presiding judicial officer has a discretion to impose a lesser sentence than the prescribed minimum sentence if he or she is satisfied that substantial and compelling circumstances exist which justify the imposition of such lesser sentence. The offences to which discretionary minimum sentences are applicable are listed in Schedule 2 to this Act. The offences listed in Part I of Schedule 2 are those which carry a minimum sentence of life imprisonment, such as, murder and rape.
- (ii) The Implementation of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court Act, 2002 (Act 27 of 2002), to which South Africa is a party, creates the offences of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes and provides that a South African court, convicting a person thereof, may impose life imprisonment. Clause 22 proposes that these crimes also be included in Part I of Schedule 2 to the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1997.

2.16 Clause 23: Amendment of section 3 of the Debt Collectors Act, 1998 (Act 114 of 1998):

Clause 23 amends section 3 of the Debt Collectors Act, 1998, by allowing members of the Council for Debt Collectors to remain in office after their term of office has expired, purely for purposes of finalising part-heard disciplinary proceedings in which they were involved. Failure to provide for this eventuality could result in disciplinary hearings having to start de novo if members of the disciplinary panel who were members of the Council for Debt Collectors vacated office during the course of such disciplinary hearings.

2.17 Clause 24: Amendment of section 5 of the Debt Collectors Act, 1998 (Act 114 of 1998):

Currently, the Debt Collectors Act, 1998, provides that the Executive Committee of the Council for Debt Collectors consists of three members of the Council. The proposed amendment to section 5 of the Act is aimed at increasing the membership of the Executive Committee to a possible five members, that is not less than three but not more than five members. The increased membership is intended to capacitate the Council and ensure that it carries out its mandate more efficiently.

2.18 Clause 25: Amendment of section 20 of the Debt Collectors Act, 1998 (Act 114 of 1998):

- (i) The Judicial Matters Amendment Act, 2005 (Act 22 of 2005), among others, amended section 20 of the Debt Collectors Act, 1998, to make provision for the Council for Debt Collectors to take control and administer the trust account of a debt collector who has his or her registration as a debt collector withdrawn or who abandons practice or ceases to practise as a debt collector. Provision was also made for the Council to administer the trust account of such a person until the Master of the High Court has appointed a curator bonis to control and administer such trust account. This section has not been put into operation.
- (ii) The proposed amendments to section 20 of the Act give the Council for Debt Collectors the power to take control over, administer and finalise a debt collector's trust account in the circumstances already mentioned in section 20, as well as in cases where there is reason to believe that a debt collector is likely to have his or her registration withdrawn. Although the Council retains the right to approach the Master to appoint a curator bonis, the right of any interested party to approach the Master in this regard is removed. It also gives the Master the power to require the payment of security from a curator bonis before he or she is appointed and it regulates the remuneration of a curator bonis.

2.19 Clause 26: Amendment of section 23 of the Debt Collectors Act, 1998 (Act 114 of 1998):

Section 23 of the Debt Collectors Act, 1998, empowers the Minister to make regulations. The proposed amendments to section 23 will allow the Minister to make regulations regarding—

- (i) the powers and duties of a curator bonis;
- (ii) the powers and duties of a Master when appointing a curator bonis; and
- (iii) the recusal of members of disciplinary committees.

2.20 Clause 27: Amendment of section 79 of the Promotion of Access to Information Act, 2000 (Act 2 of 2000):

In terms of section 79 of the Promotion of Access to Information Act, 2000, the Rules Board for Courts of Law must make certain rules of procedure. These rules have been finalised and submitted to Parliament for consideration. The amendment contained in clause 27 is intended to extend the statutory period within which the rules envisaged in section 79 must be made. It also inserts wording similar to that in the Rules Board for Courts of Law Act, 1985, in terms of which rules of court are made with the approval of the Minister. This will eliminate any uncertainty that currently exists.

2.21 Clause 28: Amendment of section 89 of the Promotion of Access to Information Act, 2000 (Act 2 of 2000):

Section 89 of the Promotion of Access to Information Act, 2000, provides that a person exercising a power or performing a duty in terms of the Act is indemnified from any criminal or civil liability if it is done in good faith, eg court personnel such as clerks of court who assist members of the public with filling in forms. The Act includes the regulations made under the Act but it does not include the rules made under the Act. The amendment proposed in clause 28 extends this indemnity to cases where court personnel assist members of the public to comply with the rules as well.

2.22 Clause 29: Amendment of section 7 of the Promotion of Administrative Justice Act, 2000 (Act 3 of 2000):

Clause 29 of the Bill extends the statutory deadline, setting a time period within which the Rules Board for Courts of Law must make rules relating to judicial review. It also inserts wording similar to that in the Rules Board for Courts of Law Act, 1985, in terms of which rules of court are made with the approval of the Minister. This will eliminate any uncertainty that currently exists.

2.23 Clause 30: Amendment of section 10 of the Promotion of Administrative Justice Act, 2000 (Act 3 of 2000):

Clause 30 of the Bill extends the statutory deadline, by when the code of good administrative conduct must be made and published.

2.24 Clause 31: Insertion of section 10A in the Promotion of Administrative Justice Act, 2000 (Act 3 of 2000):

As indicated in paragraph 2.2.1 above, section 89 of the Promotion of Access to Information Act, 2000 (PAIA), provides that a person exercising a power or performing a duty in terms of that Act is indemnified from any criminal or civil liability if it is done in good faith. The Promotion of Administrative Justice Act, 2000, does not have a corresponding provision and clause 31 inserts a provision similar to section 89 of PAIA.

2.25 Clause 32: Amendment of section 11 of the isiXhosa text of the Promotion of Administrative Justice Act, 2000 (Act 2 of 2000):

Clause 32 corrects the short title of the Promotion of Administrative Justice Act, 2000 (Act 3 of 2000) in the isiXhosa text which refers to the Act as a “1999” Act, instead of “2000”.

2.26 Clause 33: Amendment of section 33 of the Promotion of Equality and Prevention of Unfair Discrimination Act, 2000 (Act 4 of 2000):

Section 32 of the Promotion of Equality and Prevention of Unfair Discrimination Act, 2000 (PEPUDA), establishes the Equality Review Committee, consisting of a senior judicial officer, the Chairperson of the South African Human Rights Commission, the Chairperson of the Commission on Gender Equality, a representative of civil society, an expert in the field of human rights, a member of the National Assembly and a member of the National Council of Provinces. The Equality Review Committee must advise the Minister about the operation of the PEPUDA, advise the Minister about laws that impact on equality and submit regular reports to the Minister on the operation of the PEPUDA, among others. In terms of section 33(6), the members of this Committee “are entitled to such remuneration, allowances and other benefits as may be determined by the Minister, in consultation with the Minister of Finance”. Other Acts of Parliament which create statutory bodies provide specifically that members of such bodies who already receive a remuneration package from the Fiscus by virtue of the office they hold, eg a judge, a member of Parliament, a public servant, etc, are not entitled to a second remuneration package as a member of the statutory body in question. Section 33 of this Act, as it reads at present, does not specifically exclude the possibility of such members from receiving a second remuneration package. Clause 33 addresses this problem.

2.27 Clause 34: Amendment of section 7 of the Judges’ Remuneration and Conditions of Employment Act, 2001 (Act 47 of 2001):

In terms of section 7 of the Judges’ Remuneration and Conditions of Employment Act, 2001 (Act 47 of 2001), a judge who is discharged from active service and who is not yet 75 years old, must, when required to do so, perform service for three months every year. Such a judge may volunteer to perform service for more than three months if this is requested. Judges older than 75 years may also voluntarily perform this service. Voluntary service may only be performed, after consultation with the Judicial Service Commission, if the head of the court in question has so requested and if the Minister approves. In practice difficulties have been experienced in getting judges quickly to do service of this nature where additional temporary posts are created in specific courts purely to deal with additional workload or backlogs which have developed. In these instances, it is counter-productive to have to approach the Judicial Service Commission, which only sits twice a year. The proposed amendment in clause 34 will only require the request by the head of the court requiring the service and the approval by the Minister before the engagement of a judge who has been discharged from active service.

2.28 Clause 35: Amendment of section 26 of the Prevention and Combating of Corrupt Activities Act, 2004 (Act 12 of 2004):

Currently, the Magistrates Courts' Act, 1944 (Act 32 of 1944), limits lower courts (District Courts) to imposing a sentence of imprisonment for a period not exceeding three (3) years and to a fine not exceeding R60 000. While magistrates' courts have jurisdiction under the Prevention and Combating of Corrupt Activities Act, 2004 (Act 12 of 2004), the penalties provided for in that Act exceed the punitive jurisdiction of a magistrate's court. In terms of that Act, the penalties amount to imprisonment for a maximum of five (5) years, a fine of up to R250 000, and a fine equal to five times the value of the gratification involved in the offence. The proposed amendment to section 26 is intended to make it clear that a magistrate's court has the power to impose penalties in excess of its jurisdiction, as provided for in the Magistrates' Courts Act, 1944.

2.29 Clause 36: Amendment of section 42 of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences and Related Matters) Amendment Act, 2007 (Act 32 of 2007):

Clause 36 amends section 42 of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences and Related Matters) Amendment Act, 2007, (Act 32 of 2007), in order to extend the statutory deadline by when the National Register for Sex Offenders must be established. The date by when the Register must be established is 16 December 2008. Clause 36 extends this deadline to 30 June 2009.

2.30 Clause 37: Amendment of section 50 of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences and Related Matters) Amendment Act, 2007 (Act 32 of 2007):

Since the deadline for the establishment of the National Register for Sex Offenders is to be extended, clause 37 amends section 50 of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences and Related Matters) Amendment Act, 2007, in order to extend the statutory deadline by when the National Commissioner of Correctional Services, the National Commissioner of the South African Police Service and the Director-General: Health must submit information in the possession of their Departments relating to the National Register for Sex Offenders, to the Registrar of that Register.

2.31: Clause 38: Amendment of section 62 of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences and Related Matters) Amendment Act, 2007 (Act 32 of 2007):

Clause 62 amends section 50 of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences and Related Matters) Amendment Act, 2007, (Act 32 of 2007), in order to extend the statutory deadline by when the national policy framework required under section 62 of that Act must be tabled and adopted by Parliament.

10. PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE

10.1 The State Law Advisers and the Department of Justice and Constitutional Development are of the opinion that this Bill must be dealt with in accordance with the procedure established by section 75 of the Constitution since it contains no provision to which the procedure set out in section 74 or 76 of the Constitution applies.

10.2 The State Law Advisers are of the opinion that it is not necessary to refer this Bill to the National House of Traditional Leaders in terms of section 18(1)(a) of the Traditional Leadership and Governance Framework Act, 2003 (Act 41 of 2003), since it does not contain provisions pertaining to customary law or customs of traditional communities.
