REGULATIONS RELATING TO THE REGISTRATION OF A SPECIALITY IN FORENSIC SOCIAL WORK

Definitions

1. In these Regulations, unless the context indicates otherwise, a word or expression that is defined in the Act has the same meaning in these Regulations, and in addition—

"Act" means the Social Service Professions Act, 1978 (Act No.110 of 1978);

"forensic assessment" means an investigation of a specific matter by application of scientific assessment methods or processes designed to answer a question or a set of questions to establish the facts of the matter;

"forensic social work" is a specialised field of social work that focuses on the interface between the legal system and the secondary client (the individual, family, organisation or institution being assessed) and is characterised by the primary function of providing expert testimonies in courts of law;

"forensic social worker" means a social worker with scientific and specialised knowledge, skills, training and education and experience in forensic social work, who provides the court with written or oral impartial and factual expert testimony;

"forensic social work investigation" means conducting a process of forensic assessments using forensic social work knowledge, techniques and tools in order to compile a forensic social work report with accurate information to establish facts or evidence that can be used in courts of law;

"forensic social work report" means forensic social work techniques based literature on facts, assessment findings and recommendations;

"forensic social work techniques" means the application of evidence based social work assessment methods and tools used to analyse and interpret information;

"primary client" means a court of law or a body that commissions a forensic social work investigation; and

"social work" for purposes of these regulations, means a practise based profession and an academic discipline that promotes social change and development, social cohesion and the empowerment and liberation of people underpinned by theories of social work, social sciences, humanities and indigenous knowledge.

Forensic social work scope of practice

2. (1) Forensic social work practice includes –

- (a) conducting forensic social work investigations of all cases that require forensic assessment using scientifically validated protocols and techniques in relation to forensic social work;
- (b) applying relevant legislation;
- (c) applying forensic social work techniques to interpret data used in the compilation of the forensic social work report;
- (d) compiling and submitting forensic social work technique based forensic social work reports to primary clients;
