GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE COMPENSATION FUND AND ITS MEDICAL SERVICES BENEFITS DIRECTORATETHE EMPLOYEE AND THE MEDICAL SERVICE PROVIDER

Medical Service Providers are advised to take note of the following as it pertains to the treatment of patients in relation to the Compensation for Occupational Injuries and Diseases Act of 1993 (COID Act):

- An employee as defined in the COID Act of 1993, is at liberty to choose their preferred medical service provider and no interference with this is permitted, as long as it is exercised reasonably and without prejudice to the employee or the Compensation Fund.
The only exception to this rule is in case where an employer, with the approval of the Compensation Fund, provides comprehensive medical aid facilities to his employees, i.e. including hospital, nursing and other services — section 78 of the Compensation for Occupational Injuries and Diseases Act refers.
- In terms of section 42 of the COID Act of 1993, the Compensation Fund may refer an injured employee to a specialist medical practitioner designated by the Director General for a medical examination and report. Special fees are payable when this service is requested.
- In terms of section 76,3(b) of the COID Act of 1993, no amount in respect of medical expenses shall be recoverable from the employee.
- In the event of a change of a medical practitioner attending to a case, the first treating doctor in attendance will, except where the case is transferred to a specialist, be regarded as the principal treating doctor.
- To avoid disputes regarding the payment for services rendered, medical practitioners should refrain from treating an employee already under treatment by another doctor without consulting / informing the principal treating doctor. As a general rule, changes of doctor are not favoured by the Compensation Fund, unless sufficient reasons exist for such a change.
- According to the National Health Act no 61 of 2003, Section 5, a health care provider may not refuse a person emergency medical treatment. Such a medical service provider should not request the Compensation Fund to authorise such treatment before the claim has been submitted to and liability for the claim is accepted by the Compensation Fund.
 - Pre-authorisation of treatment is not possible and no medical expense will be approved if liability for the claim has not been accepted by the Compensation Fund.
- An employee seeks medical advice at their own risk. If such an employee presents themselves to a medical practitioner as being entitled to treatment in terms of the COID Act of 1993, whilst having failed to inform their employer and/or the Compensation Fund of any possible grounds for a claim, the Compensation Fund cannot accept responsibility for the settlement of medical expenses incurred.
- The Compensation Fund could also have reasons to repudiate a claim lodged with it, in such circumstances the employee would be in the same position as any other member of the public regarding payment of his medical expenses.

REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

- Proof of identity is required in the form of a copy of a South African Identity document/card, will be required in order for a claim to be registered with the Compensation Fund.
 - In the case of foreign nationals, the proof of identity (passport) must be certified.
- All supporting documentation submitted to the Compensation Fund must reflect the identity and claim number of the employee.
- The completion of medical reports cannot be claimed separately as they are inclusive in all medical tariffs.
- The tariff amounts published in the gazette guides for medical services rendered in terms of the COID Act do not include VAT. All invoices for services will therefore be assessed without VAT.
- VAT will therefore be calculated and applied without rounding off to invoices for service providers that have confirmed their VAT vendor status with the Compensation Fund by the submission of their VAT registration number.

DefinitionFeet

SACH	The external keel of a foot prosthesis is the firm part on the bottom of the prosthesis, extending from the heel to the toe. The keel is both a structural support and a shock absorber as the patient transfers weight from heel to toe while walking. The SACH foot has a rubber heel wedge that lets the ankle move by compressing under weight bearing during the start of stance walking phase. It is available in different heel heights allowing wearing with various types of shoes.
SACH composite	Flexible keel prosthetic feet are more advanced than solid ankle cushioned heel or SACH feet. However, they do not return energy in the way a dynamic response foot would. It offers cushioning and absorption of energy but does not store and return the same amount of energy.
Single axis	An articulated single axis foot and ankle prosthesis uses a hinge to allow the ankle to dorsiflex and plantar flex, or move up and down. Single axis feet do this with a hinge in the prosthesis at about the location of the transverse tarsal joint on the human foot. Because the prosthesis moves in a single axis, specifically up and down, movement is in the sagittal plane only. Single axis feet differ from solid ankle cushion heel foot, or SACH, feet in several ways.

Multi axis	A multiaxial foot can move in multiple planes of direction, providing its user the ability to walk on uneven surfaces. This differs from a single axis foot prosthesis that allows only plantar flexion and dorsiflexion in the sagittal plane. This design allows the forefoot of the foot or ankle mechanism to move appropriately on uneven surfaces, much as a human foot would.
ESAR	The foot uses a carbon and/or nylon flexible internal keel, a firm yet flexible plate located inside the sole of the prosthesis, extending from the heel to the toe. The keel is both a structural support and a shock absorber as the patient transfers weight from heel to toe while walking. The dual spring action of the keel gives a smooth transition from heel to toe as the foot moves through a walking gait, giving additional stability and confidence to its wearer.
Active suspension	Elevated vacuum suspension which controls and reduces volume fluctuations during ambulation. The suspension is a mechanism which incorporates the foot and socket suction suspension to achieve the desired elevated vacuum.
Axial rotation	An axial rotation unit allows a prosthetic limb to twist to the right or the left, helping people walk more naturally. The axial rotation accommodate rotational forces during heel strike, mid stance, terminal stance and pre-swing. Properly functioning axial rotation devices allow a socket to relieve pressure on the stump as the patient moves.
Low profile	Decreased build height which accommodates longer residual limbs with limited ground clearance
ESAR - multi axial	A multiaxial foot primarily manufactured out of carbon fiber which can move in multiple planes of direction, providing its user the ability to walk on uneven surfaces. This design allows the forefoot of the foot or ankle mechanism to move appropriately on uneven surfaces, much as a human foot would.
Carbon pylon	One end of the pylon directly fits into the residual limb socket, and the other end fits into the prosthetic foot. The aim of the prosthetic pylon is to store and release energy additional energy to the
Heel adjustable	This code describes prosthetic foot with a heel height that the patient can adjust to the desired angle. Not only does this benefit a patient cosmetically by allowing adjustment to the prosthetic heel to the shoe heel height, but it can also help foot balance and support the knee, improving the patient's gait.
ESAR multi composite	The foot uses nylon, glass fibre or other composites with flexible internal keel, a firm yet flexible plate located inside the sole of the prosthesis, extending from the heel to the toe. The keel is both a structural support and a shock absorber as the patient transfers weight from heel to toe while walking. The dual spring action of the keel gives a smooth transition from heel to toe as the foot moves through a walking gait, giving additional stability and confidence to its wearer.

Knee

Locking	Unit is locked stiff at the knee unit when in use. The knee will not bend until a release mechanism is operated to free the knee lock
Friction controlled	Prosthetic knee unit which is controlled with friction functions within the unit
Pneumatic controlled	Prosthetic knee unit which is controlled with pneumatic functions within the unit
Hydraulic controlled	Prosthetic knee unit which is controlled with hydraulic functions within the unit
Pneumatic + electronic motor	Multifaceted knee unit which consists of pneumatic chambers and externally powered to control the functioning of the unit
Hydraulic + electronic motor control	Multifaceted knee unit which consists of hydraulic chambers and externally powered to control the functioning of the unit
Single axis	During the flexion/extension the prosthetic knee articulate rotationally around one knee axis
4-Bar linkage	During the flexion/extension the prosthetic knee articulate rotationally around four knee axis
Multi axis	During the flexion/extension the prosthetic knee articulate rotationally around multiple knee

Hip

Polycentric hydraulic hip joint	Multi-axis joint structure which produces three-dimensional hip movement through a hydraulic unit to compensate for pelvic rotation and promote a symmetrical, natural gait
Monocentric hydraulic hip joint	Single-axis joint structure which produces three-dimensional hip movement through a hydraulic unit to compensate for pelvic rotation and promote a symmetrical, natural gait
Extension assist hip	Single axis joint with possibility to adjust Abduction/adduction, flexion/extension, and
Single axis locking hip joint	Built-in manual lock which automatically engages in full extension to add stability and can be manually disengaged for sitting
Single axis elastic extension assist hip	Extension assist with laterally attached latex bands help with stride control, with adjustable built-in extension stop bumper

Liners

Locking liner	Interface which acts between the residual limb and socket where the liner has a distal pin
Suction liner	Interface which acts between the residual limb and socket where the liner incorporates a
Cushion liner	Interface which acts between the residual limb and socket. This is worn in conjunction with
Knee sleeve	Sleeve worn over the prosthetic socket to create a seal between residual limb and
Hybrid liner	Liner incorporating locking and suction suspension in one
Adjustable suction (includes ring and liner)	Suction liner which has the ability to adjust the area of suction depending on residual limb volume fluctuations
Distal volume cup	Item used for conical and/or sensitive residual limbs requiring volume build-up

Suspension

Hybrid lock	A combination suspension solution incorporating locking suspension with the benefits of
Active vacuum	Vacuum system that pulls vacuum in the socket using the energy created by stance and
Expulsion valve kit	Direct integrated system to create suction suspension via a valve setup within the lower
TF proximal socket seal-in ring for suction suspension	Sealing ring for use with TF suction vacuum sockets. Ring can be positioned manually to maximize area of the limb under suction or vacuum
Plug fit suction valve	Flat rubber valve manually donned in socket to created vacuum suspension
Pull in pvc tube	Tube breaching the gap between the socket and plug fit valve
Shuttle lock (pin/lanyard)	A pin or lanyard which attaches on the bottom of a liner which goes to a female receiver that is fixed within the prosthetic socket.
Magnetic locking system	A magnetic pin which attaches on the bottom of a liner which goes to a integrated magnetic female receiver that is fixed within the prosthetic socket.
Kiss locking system	Shuttle lanyard system for transfemoral amputees through housing receiver that is fixed
