POWERING OUR ECONOMY through transformation.

Why the IDC is dedicated to sustainability, inclusivity and making the switch to renewable energy.

In view of South Africa's energy challenges, the IDC - through its funding support to the energy sector, has been proactive in contributing to the country's Just Energy Transition and energy security.

IDC's funding activity has benefited entities with exposure to energy generation and efficiency. These projects are aimed at reducing greenhouse gas emissions. Funded projects have ranged in various sizes from utility scale, through to smaller scale distributed energy solutions, either for Own-Use by Commercial and Industrial sector companies or for sale by Independent Power Producers.

Of significance to the IDC is the need to empower communities to power themselves on multiple tiers, and allowing them to benefit from inclusive, equitable, and sustainable development in their respective regions.

With over R15 billion invested in renewable energy projects spread across the country, the Corporation has funded 25 Community Trusts, enabling them to actively participate in the country's Renewable Energy Independent Power Producer Procurement Programme (REIPPP).

Our support is purposeful in ensuring that communities use these dividends for socio-economic development, addressing poverty and unemployment through community-based development programmes.

Samsung Continues to Create Sustainable Opportunities for SME's

Matongoni General Trading

The Samsung enterprise development programme has produced far-reaching, measurable outcomes that may have even surpassed initial projections. An investment contribution of R87-Million over three years, with the bulk of the investment channelled into enterprise development and black industrialisation to support black-owned and women-owned enterprises. The beneficiaries were part of rigorous selection criteria to ensure that they could maximise the capital needed for business operations and future growth.

With environmental sustainability being one of the major focus areas for Samsung, two black-women-owned E-waste businesses were supported. Skills development is essential to combating youth unemployment and a further two Software Development enterprises were on-boarded. In addition, to provide marginalised communities with better access to electronic repair services and encourage a culture of entrepreneurship, two Accredited Service Centres were created. Access to supply chain is a critical component and therefore in-warranty volumes for its accredited service centre programme are provided. Further, support to e-waste companies include access to e-waste volumes from Samsung warehouses and its network of service centres.

SAMSUNG

South Africa's favourite technology brand, launched at the dawn of democracy in the country, is focussed on creating products and services that empower people to do more. It's an approach embraced by a generation that is connecting, creating and taking bold steps into a future. Importantly though, for a global brand Samsung strongly believes in the transformative power of technology to effect great positive change. This is reflected in the company's Level 1 BBB-EE Rating, which is aligned with Samsung's dedication to remain an active contributor to the future of the South African economy.
